Tourney time teaches more than the game

Middle school students use math to construct NCAA tournament brackets

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Before millions of people were filling out what are now busted brackets for the NCAA basketball tournament, seventh-graders at Anderson County Middle School were figuring out who those bracket-busters would be.

It all came about as a class project sponsored by math teachers/basketball fans Leslie Edmondson and Michael Phillips to use March Madness as a way teach statistics, inferences from them and probability.

"We had them look at all 351 Division I teams and they made their own tournament field," Edmondson said. "They were to seed the teams in regions just like the NCAA Tournament."

According to the class instructions, the students could use several resources, including the Ratings Percentage Index, one of the resources used by the NCAA. Students also could consult several other websites to make their rankings.

Edmondson said the students also took into account automatic bids to the tournament, which means that the top 64 - actually 68 - teams do not necessarily make the tournament.

Students worked in pairs with two groups seeding 31 teams to match the work done by the NCAA tournament committee. The regions might have been different in the results, however.

"It was hilarious at times," Edmondson said. "The kids got so competitive. Even some of the kids who are not

'Tyrone Bridge' is Custom Made on new CD

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

One of the newest CDs on the market is bluegrass, custom made.

Or more precisely, it is bluegrass band Custom Made Bluegrass with its new release, "Tyrone Bridge."

The group, which is well-known to bluegrass music fans in central Kentucky, features Anderson County resident Kevin Chilton on the banjo.

Chilton wrote the CD's title cut, "Tyrone Bridge," which Chilton says he has been seeing nearly every day for over two decades.

"I work at the Wild Turkey distillery and have been there 26 years, so I have looked at the Tyrone Bridge for many years and it was the inspiration for my song and title," Chilton said in an e-mail.

A mutual friend introduced Chilton to several members of the band two years ago and Custom Made

Fish fries combine food, music, fellowship

By Nancy Royden
Special to The Anderson News

The family life center at St. Lawrence Roman Catholic Church was a hive of activity last Friday night.

Food, music and fellowship mingled during the parish's Lenten Friday night fish fry, and it was all for a good cause - to raise money to support the church, including planned improvements to the parking lot at the church, located at 120 Gatewood Avenue.

Richard Pike, who has been part of the church for 31 years, said the fish fries started out as a fellowship for parishioners, but has grown into a community-wide event. The fries are held each Friday during Lent, except on Good Friday, April 3.

sports fans really got into it. "It was hard to place the teams but they had to do it using statistics and probabilities." Predictably, Kentucky was the overwhelming choice as the number one overall seed, Edmondson said. Beyond that, the students disagreed on the other number one seeds - Wisconsin, Villanova and Duke - just like basketball fans across the country. But the project did not stop there. "They got to pick one team they disagreed with the seeding and had to prove their conclusion using statistics and why they disagreed with the NCAA Committee," Edmondson said. While some argued for or against teams in the field, Edmondson said another popular choice was a team that did not make the field. "We had many students who were convinced Murray State should have been in the tournament," Edmondson said. "A lot were upset that Indiana made the tournament and Murray State didn't." Many fans and national commentators agreed with that assessment as Murray posted a 27-5 record on selection Sunday and had put together a 25-game winning streak before losing to Belmont in the OVC Tournament final. Murray State eventually accepted a bid to the National Invitation Tournament and routed UTEP in the first round. Indiana finished the season at 20-14 after losing to Wichita State in the NCAA opener. Phillips, a University of Louisville graduate and fan, said the project brought the disciplines of mathematics to life. "They enjoyed this because they can relate so well," he said. Phillips took the project even further, setting up a closed bracket prediction contest for the students. Friday, after the first day of the tournament, students were already comparing their results. "It was funny," Edmondson said. "They came in asking each other about their brackets." It might not have been something that could be proven statistically, but it would not have been difficult to infer the probability of that happening either. After all, it is March Madness.

Judge-Executive Orbrey Gritton suggested entering into a contract with Shingleton. "I say we hire you as a contractor and let you line up the buyers," Gritton said. "He would need full authority over this as to who we sell it to." Gritton said the fiscal court's solid waste committee would discuss that idea and work with County Attorney Bobbi Jo Lewis to develop a contract along with how Shingleton would be paid. Gritton said afterward that he's looking forward to working with Shingleton to see if the cost of hauling materials can be eliminated. "He had been involved some in the past administration but it was deemed his help wasn't needed," Gritton said. "Mr. Shingleton has some buyers that would purchase our recyclable goods and not charge the county haul fees, poundage fees or fuel surcharge. We are looking to explore these options further." Shingleton said the fiscal court also needs to generate renewed interest in its recycling program, which showed a reduction in the volume of co-min-gled items last year. "We need to get people interested in it again," Shingleton said, adding that he is planning to write a letter to the editor of The Anderson News laying out his thoughts on the program. "I have people who say they are throwing away stuff to help save the county money."

Gritton, mayor discussing joint tourism commission

Judge-Executive Orbrey Gritton confirmed last week that he has been holding discussions with Lawrenceburg Mayor Sandy Goodlett to allow the city to join the county's tourism authority. He also confirmed that the county has sent letters to local bed and breakfasts to let them know they are obligated to pay the 3 percent transient room fee that until now had been collected from the only hotel in the county, the Best Western. Merging tourism with the city became a contentious issue during the previous administration when former judge-executive John Wayne Conway rebuffed overtures from former Mayor Edwinna Baker, saying his fear was that the city council would enact a restaurant tax, which he stridently opposed. Gritton said a restaurant tax is not something he and the mayor have discussed. "The mayor and I have not discussed any restaurant tax," Gritton said. "I would welcome that discussion but that would come from the mayor and city council. Gritton and Goodlett both said they were not in favor of a restaurant tax while campaigning last year.

County/Lawrenceburg Economic Development Authority, was named deputy judge-executive in a surprise announcement last Tuesday night. Cammack replaces Cheryl Peach, who held the title during the latter portion of former judge-executive Steve Cornish's administration and throughout all of former judge-executive John Wayne Conway's time in office. Peach will remain employed as Gritton's executive secretary. Gritton said Lewis, the county attorney, is working to determine if Cammack is to be paid for the position. "I chose Charlie Cammack because of his knowledge and commitment to Anderson County," Gritton said following the meeting. "He has been involved, and continues to be involved, in this community. He will have a part-time role with our office. His stability and professionalism made him an easy choice. We are very excited that he has accepted this position and look forward to working with him in moving this county forward." Gritton said it was Peach's decision to step down from the position. "Cheryl had voiced to me prior to me taking office that she really didn't want the deputy judge position," Gritton said. "She took the position again but it was a joint decision on both our parts that once a replacement was found that she step down."

Magistrates OK borrowing

To balance its upcoming budget, the fiscal court formally authorized Gritton to enter into a contract with the Kentucky Association of Counties (KACo) to borrow $400,000. The vote was unanimous. The money is needed to offset significant losses in the county's recycling program.

Making prisoners pay to stay

Shelby County Jailer Bobby Waits told magistrates last Tuesday that he and Anderson County Jailer Joani Clark are discussing recouping housing costs from prisoners by taking money out of their canteen funds. "We can take up to 50 percent," Waits said. "We are looking into that." Anderson contracts with Shelby to house prisoners, which takes more than $600,000 of the Clark's annual $800,000 budget. The move to take prisoners' canteen funds is just the latest effort to recoup the cost of housing them. In 2007, the fiscal court adopted an ordinance that allowed prisoners to be billed for their time in jail, which costs around $30 a day. Clark said the county recovered some money by doing so, but later determined that doing so wasn't worth the effort. Clark said the only option available if inmates declined to pay the bill would be to file a claim in small claims court, which proved too time consuming and expensive.

"It has really grown. It started with 125 people. There is seating and take-out. We now serve approximately 250 in take-out and in the parish hall," he said. Some of those who worked in the kitchen preparing the food have volunteered for more than 15 years, Pike said. The menu includes fried and baked Alaskan cod fillets, seasoned and regular potato wedges, homemade hushpuppies, cole slaw, baked beans, dessert and drinks. Musicians of the Puncheon Creek band performed, and Lawrenceburg's Steve Ross played "My Old Kentucky Home" on the saw. Strains from the mandolin, fiddle, saw, guitar and harmonica filled the parish hall as diners ate at one of the many tables inside the parish hall. Deacon Reid Lawrence Myers offered a prayer of thanksgiving for the gifts of community, food and entertainment. Parishioner Richard Day is one of those who labor in the kitchen at St. Lawrence. He is known at St. Lawrence as the "hushpuppy man." On Friday, he made hushpuppy after hushpuppy for the diners. Some of the fish makers included Joe Monette, Rogelio Carbajal and Ron Williams. Young Abigail Lykins and other youth and adults served the meal and dessert to hundreds of people. The next fish fry is scheduled for Friday, March 27 from 5:30 to 7 p.m. For more information, call the parish office at 502-839-6381 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Bluegrass was born. According to the group's website, "The band is comfortable performing traditional bluegrass songs or country songs 'grassed up.'"

The new CD was recorded at Skaggs Family Records, owned by country and bluegrass legend Ricky Skaggs, and includes some original material. The CD was released on March 13.

Chilton is well-known in Anderson County and central Kentucky after serving as banjo player for Stringtown, a local group, for 12 years.

"My dad, Leon Chilton, was a great banjo player and my main influence," Chilton said. "I was very lucky to have someone like him to show me the way."

A fifth-generation banjo picker, Chilton says he is passing the art on to his son as well.

"It's in the blood, I guess," he said.

Chilton said the new CD is a mix of the old and new, including a song, "Kentucky Proud," written by guitarist Van Ramey. Chilton said the song "tells about some things we all love about our great state."

Other members of the group include Ron Bowling on mandolin, Steve Maynard on the dobro and Barry Boggess on bass.

The group's newest work includes covers of songs from Bill Monroe and the Bluegrass Boys as well as music originally recorded by Flatt and Scruggs. The band also recorded its own version of the bluegrass standard, "Fox on the Run."

The group plays many of the bluegrass festivals throughout the state. Its next performance will be on April 11 at Meadowgreen Park in Clay City, when the band opens for The Box-cars."

Chilton said the CD is available for purchase on the band's website, on its Facebook page or at any of its shows.

Chilton hopes the new project touches hearts. "I hope people that hear our CD will find something that touches their heart, and takes them back in time to the older times when life wasn't so fast."

Is Shingleton answer to recycling problems?

Column as I see 'em ... Well, folks, it's official. As of a week or so ago, the county government - and by extension, you - is now $400,000 deeper in debt after the fiscal court voted unanimously to borrow that much money to balance its next budget.

If you follow along you already know the reason why: the recycling program that costs a fortune and brings in almost no revenue.

Solving that problem isn't an option; either the fiscal court stops the bleeding from the program or continues to borrow hundreds of thousands of dollars a year to keep it going.

I'm intrigued at the notion of having Red Shingleton - a man who has forgotten more about how to profitably recycle than those who set up this program combined - act as the county's agent in selling recyclables.

If he can get the stuff hauled at no cost and turns a bit of a profit, so be it. But the best chance the county has of getting out from under this behemoth is to kill it and make recycling a requirement of the company that secures the county's next trash contract, which comes up in July.

But the best chance the county has of getting out from under this behemoth is to kill it and make recycling a requirement of the company that secures the county's next trash contract, which comes up in July.

in her wayward son's or daughter's canteen account and half of it magically disappears, it would stand to reason that momma would wise up fairly quickly.

I like, too, the ordinance passed here around 2007 that allows the county to bill inmates for their housing costs.

That ordinance is a bit toothless because, if the inmate doesn't pay, the county has little recourse but to sue in small claims court. It costs about $50 to file the suit and, even if the county gets a judgment, collecting that money is almost impossible.

That law is based on a state law, and the county can't make it stiffer on its own. But I can't help but wonder if instead of filing suits, the county wouldn't be better served to turn over uncollected amounts to a company that specializes in debt collection. Of course that would cost the county a portion of whatever is collected, but any money it receives is a bonus, anyway.

Of course there will be those who think the entire notion of making criminals pay for their room and board is somehow mean.

Not me. A very small percentage of the 20,000 or so people who live here commit the vast majority of the crime and cost the rest of us over $800,000 a year to give them three hots and a cot, nevermind the cost of their attorneys.

And if being hounded by a collection agency doesn't do the trick, every effort should be made to have the county first in line should someone refusing to pay gets a tax refund.

Speaking of collections ...

I found it interesting that the county has alerted bed and breakfasts that they, too, are supposed to remitting a 3 percent transient room tax to the fiscal court.

Who knows why previous fiscal courts failed to enforce that portion of the law, which is designed to fund the county's tourism authority.

Best Western until now has been the only one ponying up for that tax.

Speaking of tourism ...

I'm taking a wait and see attitude on news that Judge-Executive Orbrey Gritton and Mayor Sandy Goodlett are discussing merging the county's tourism authority with the city.

Because they and every other seated city council member and magistrate all said they are opposed to a restaurant tax to fund tourism, those of us who for years have been nervous that such a tax would be the logical outcome of a city-county tourism merger can relax.

Right?

Time for local schools to look at more ways to deal with snow

I will never be one complain that Anderson County Schools should be in session on a winter day when my street is clear.

While my home is now only a good snowball throw from the Lawrenceburg city limits, I lived well out in Anderson County for most of my life, including 15 years on a one-lane road. I have a pretty good idea of why schools are often dismissed when my friends who live in or close to town are wondering why.

For the record, there are times when I would not want to be driving a school bus on a one-lane road when the weather is perfect, much less when weather can make things iffy at best. And for their belief that the safety of students should be foremost in their decisions concerning weather-related class dismissals, those in charge of making the decisions should be applauded, not vilified.

That being said, though, I can't help but think creative ways of dealing with long absences from school should be explored, most notably, a snow plan that would put more of the responsibility for getting kids to school on the parents.

Recently, I talked with Anderson County superintendent Sheila Mitchell and Director of Student Services Derek Shouse about this issue. They rightly noted some logistical problems with turnarounds being an issue as things are now.

However, it would seem there are enough meeting places such as churches or businesses on roads that would not require a turnaround to make such a plan work when roads might not be safe for busses, but are navigable for cars or trucks.

Parents make sure their children make other trips. It is not unreasonable to ask they take their kids to the bus for, at most, a handful of days each year.

It's obviously something that could not be devised on a whim, but expanding the limited snow plan Anderson County already has in place is worth a look.

Make instant raised beds using pallets

We're going green! Hello spring! I am so glad to see you! New life really is springing up everywhere and the prominent color is green. Those never ending carpets will soon bring forth more colorful flowers and food. I'm pretty fond of them both!

The wild garlic is popping up anywhere it wants, chased by a rainbow of colors in star gazers, crocus, tulips, daffodils, pansies and violas. If you didn't plant spring blooming bulbs last fall, it's not too late to bring a splash of color into the landscape. Talk a walk around garden centers and it's easy to figure out what is good to plant, at least in containers and beds, right about now.

I noticed that even Walmart had big bags of organic potting soil in their long line of garden supplies. For those of us who can't wait to stick our green thumbs into the dirt, but our wet soil is preventing it, seek out a container or two. Pots on the porch are the obvious first choice, but you can get creative.

Try stacking a few with increasing smaller sizes. Find an antique watering can to use. Plant a mix of tall in the middle and flowing around the edges. Look for different leaf colors to mix, in addition to the mix of flowers.

You can make instant raised beds, without even raising a hammer! All you need is a bag of soil, a wooden pallet, some landscape fabric and a staple gun. Staple the landscape fabric to the bottom of the pallet, to create a floor of sorts. Fill the space inside the pallet with potting soil. Now you can plant perfect rows of lettuce, radish, spinach and herbs, by seed, in the rows.

You can also turn the pallet on its edge, to create a living wall of sorts. This takes more time, because you have to create more "floors," if you will, and attach it to a real wall. You still cover the whole bottom with landscape fabric, but you also staple the matting to create little row floors. You can Google pallet planting to see what I mean.

I've also seen people using straw bales and bags of potting soil to plant food. Basically, you lay a bag of potting solid on top of a bale of straw. Slice the bag of soil open, by cutting the plastic straight down the middle, then along the top and bottom so you have a completely open bag. Then, use a long pencil or sharp stick to poke holes in the bottom, through the plastic, so water will drain down into the straw. Finally, you plant your seeds in mini rows.

When the sun finally does soak up all this water, we can break out the shovels, hoes and tillers. Though I mess with flowers, shrubs and trees way less than vegetables, this year I will be planting a permanent memorial to life.

There are those among us who celebrate life every day. Those that make us smile each time we see them and change our hearts forever. I lost such a friend last week and you knew her too. My beloved Golden Retriever, Tiller, gave me her last kiss. Spanky and Zeus were there to give me hugs.

Tiller and I were together 18 years here on the farm. She saved my life, more than once. So, I thought it fitting to honor her life by planting a reminder to celebrate life every day. Golden Bell, also known as Forsythia, will soon bring me a burst of yellow sunshine each spring. I planted it where she loved to lay. While she'll always be in my heart, she will live on forever here at home.

Now, let's ALL celebrate life by making this earth a rainbow of colors this spring! Plant some new life of your own to make you smile every day. You won't just be "Happy Growing!" you'll be growing Happy!

Rainfall sets stage for nuisance pests

Springtails

Springtails are tiny wingless insects that can flip into the air, giving them the appearance of tiny fleas. They would go completely unnoticed except that hundreds of them can accumulate on surfaces like a small, dusty gray carpet that moves.

Most springtails live in rich soil or leaf litter, under bark or decaying wood, or in association with fungi. Many are scavengers, feeding on decaying plants, fungi, molds, or algae. Springtails become abundant among wet leaves, soil, and plant material along a house foundation or sidewalks, where they can be a temporary annoyance. They also can occur around floor drains, in damp basements, and in crawl spaces. Masses of these insects can be swept up and discarded.

Springtails do not survive in dry conditions. Any steps to improve ventilation and promote drying are the best long term solutions. Removal of accumulations of wet leaves or other organic matter will eliminate breeding sites. Aerosol household insecticides can be used to treat infestations but will provide only temporary relief if the favorable conditions are not corrected.

Midges and Gnats

Midges and gnats, such as fungus gnats and March flies, are common names for a large number of small, non-biting flies. Many species look like mosquitoes and may form annoying swarms or clouds in the air, but they do not bite. Immature stages develop in water in pools, containers, ponds, clogged rain gutters, or in some cases, wet soil or seepage areas. Most feed on living or decaying plant matter and are an important part of aquatic food chains.

There are no good alternatives for control of the adults; however, they only live for a few days. If necessary, resting accumulations of these insects can be treated with an aerosol spray containing pyrethrins. These are impractical for treating anything other than small areas. These products only kill insects that are directly hit by spray particles; there is no lasting or residual effect.

Clover Mites and Winter Grain Mites

Clover mites and winter grain mites are active in some lawns. Clover mites are very small, reddish-brown creatures that appear only as moving dark spots to the naked eye. Winter grain mites have dark black bodies with long red legs.

Sheer numbers of either mite, plus the resulting red-brown stain left behind if they are crushed, make them unwelcome visitors. The red stains are not blood; they are the mite's body pigments. These mites are not blood feeders and will not harm people or pets, nor will they infest household products. Once inside a home or building, they will soon die.

Clover mites and winter grain mites feed on turf grasses or weeds. They can be especially abundant in the heavy, succulent growth of well-fertilized lawns. They usually enter a home around windows or doors, so they can be seen crawling along sills or thresholds. The mites can crawl up outside walls and may enter the buildings at upper levels.

Lawn mites are a temporary nuisance; they appear suddenly and then are gone. A soapy rag or wet sponge can be used to clean mites off of surfaces. Wipe carefully to avoid crushing the mites and causing stains. The crevice tool of a vacuum cleaner may also be used to pick up mites. Rely on non-chemical control indoors. Do not apply insecticides to kitchen counters or other interior surfaces.

There is an increased potential for invasion when grass extends up to a structure's foundation. A plant bed or open area will provide a barrier that will stop many mites and provide a long term solution to persistent problems. Avoid applying excess fertilizer to lawns; this creates situations that are ideal for mites to increase to tremendous numbers.

Mites seen on the outside of buildings can be killed with a direct spray of an insecticidal soap. This treatment will not provide any residual control. A spray of a labeled synthetic pyrethroid insecticide along the outside walls and extending about 10 feet out from the foundation may provide some relief.

Try beef and broccoli stir-fry tonight

Kentucky is the largest beef cattle state east of the Mississippi River and ranks eighth nationally in beef cattle production. Cattle production represents a multi-billion dollar industry in Kentucky. Anderson County is one of the top 40 beef producing counties in Kentucky. I encourage all beef producers to join the Anderson County Cattleman's Association.

Beef is America's number one food source for protein, an essential nutrient for the human body at any age. Protein helps build, maintain and repair body tissues, form hormones, and increase resistance to infection and disease. Beef is one of the most important dietary sources of iron which helps carry oxygen to body cells and tissues. Iron is also needed in making new red blood cells, and aids in brain development.

A three-ounce serving of beef is about the size of a deck of playing cards. There are 29 cuts of lean beef with a total fat content that falls between a skinless chicken breast and a skinless chicken thigh, when comparing cooked three-ounce servings. A three-ounce serving of 95 percent lean ground beef has around 140 calories and five grams of total fat.

Broccoli is a favorite spring vegetable. Frozen broccoli is an excellent choice any time of year. In fact, frozen broccoli florets are cheaper than buying fresh. Raising your own broccoli and other produce is the best. Broccoli can be found in local gardens and farmers markets from May through early July, and, October through mid-November. It's time to get your garden ready. In fact, it's getting late to plant the early spring crops.

Americans are eating more broccoli than ever. Consumption has increased more than 940 percent over the last 25 years! It's a good source of vitamins A and C, potassium, folate, iron, calcium, and fiber. Broccoli contains important phytochemicals that prevent carcinogens (cancer causing substances) from forming in the body. Another good thing is that one-half cup serving of raw broccoli contains only 10 calories.

Choose broccoli that is dark green. Good color indicates high nutrient value. Dark green, purplish, or bluish green florets contain more beta-carotene and vitamin C than paler or yellowing ones. Choose bunches with firm stalks. Stalks that bend or seem rubbery are poor quality. Avoid broccoli with open, flowering, discolored, or water-soaked bud clusters and tough, woody stems.

Store broccoli unwashed, in an open plastic bag and place in the crisper drawer of the refrigerator. It is best if used within a day or two after purchasing.

For a healthy dinner tonight, try this colorful stir-fry recipe. A good choice for a cut of beef for stir-fry would be the flat-iron steak or a sirloin.

Beef and Broccoli Stir-Fry

1 pound lean beef steak, sliced diagonally across the grain into thin strips

1 tablespoon plus 1/2 cup stir-fry sauce

1 clove minced garlic

4 tablespoons canola oil, divided

1 medium red onion, cut into 1/2 inch dice

1 sweet red pepper, cut into 1/2 inch dice

1 medium yellow squash, cut into 1/4 inch slices

2 cups fresh or frozen broccoli florets

1 cup cauliflower florets

1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes

Directions:

Combine 1 tablespoon stir-fry sauce and minced garlic in a bowl. Add the beef strips. Let stand 15 minutes.

Heat 1 tablespoon canola oil in a large skillet or wok. Add beef and stir fry for one minute. Remove beef from skillet.

Heat the remaining 3 tablespoons canola oil in the skillet or wok. Add vegetables. Stir-fry for four minutes or until vegetables are crisp-tender.

Return beef to skillet. Add the remaining 1/2 cup stir-fry sauce and red pepper flakes. Cook and stir 1 to 2 minutes longer, until heated through.

Yield: 8, 1 cup servings.

Professor presents artistry, stories through quilts

Photo furnished

Pearlie M. Johnson, assistant professor of Pan-African Studies and Art History at the University of Louisville, speaks about quilts and their quilts Thursday night at the Anderson County Senior Citizens Center.

By Nancy Royden

Special to The Anderson News

Some quilts may be pretty to behold, but oftentimes are much more than handicrafts that entice the onlooker — they may have “stories and griefs” stitched into them.

The tales that were woven into many quilts are worthy of being collected, recorded and shared, Dr. Pearl M. Johnson told those gathered Thursday night at the Anderson County Senior Citizens Center on Township Square.

“They had to be sewing experts,” said Johnson, an assistant professor of pan-African studies and art history at the University of Louisville. Her visit to Lawrenceburg was sponsored by the Kentucky Humanities Council and the Anderson Public Library.

Johnson explained that if a slave became proficient at a skill such as cooking or sewing, they would become more valuable to their masters, and less likely to be sold.

Although slaves were unable to openly carry on their own traditions, they found ways to do this without their masters knowing through quilt designs, she said.

Johnson is researching African American quilters and their quilts and/or, their family quilts. She has been interviewing quilters and family members in throughout Kentucky, she said.

Her study examines cross-cultural parallels in technique and assemblage, as well as discovering unique designs, Johnson said.

When looking for information regarding African Americans and quilting in Kentucky, Johnson said there was not much to be found. She seeks to fill in gaps through her study, which will be used to produce a documentary, quilt exhibition, and published book.

No matter the racial makeup of families, all quilts should be valued and properly documented because they are part of history, she said.

In her presentation, Johnson shared photographs of slaves in front of cabins and a loom house for weaving cloth.

She explained how colorful African Kente cloth, with its varying hues, was used only by royalty. Some of the works she shared exhibit this design style.

“They were really based on cultural memory,” she said about the quilts with patterns similar to Kente cloth.

Johnson is named after her grandmother, who lived from 1895 to 1989. She was from Marietta, Texas, in the northeast corner of the state.

During her slide show, Johnson showed photos of her grandmother and the many quilts she created. Even after she died, the quilts are more than a visual reminder of her life.

“Her presence was there,” Johnson said.

Home damaged? Dynamic Restoration LLC can help

The last thing homeowners want to do when they've experienced a fire or other damage is get buried under a mountain of insurance forms and try to figure out how to get their homes properly and professionally repaired.

That's where Dynamic Restoration LLC — a fully licensed and insured restoration company located at 206 East Court St., Lawrenceburg — comes in.

"We make it simple," says Nena Velasquez who, along with her husband, Luis, owns the company that has now been in business for seven years.

"One of our trained professional claim specialists will perform a thorough inspection of the exterior of your home.

"If your home has sustained storm-related damage, we help you file your insurance claim, meet with your insurance adjuster, and complete the repairs according to the insurance company's specifications.

"We use fully qualified specialists and work directly with your insurance company and mortgage company throughout the process.

"Plus, we have an A rating with the Better Business Bureau! This ensures you get the best quality service without the hassle."

Nena, a native of Lawrenceburg, says her husband's family has years of experience in the construction business. He has parlayed that experience into striking out on his own, building their business from the ground up through his connections and by providing outstanding customer service.

Now, she says, Dynamic Restoration LLC covers all of Kentucky along with Indiana and West Virginia, helping homeowners restore their homes.

"We mainly do exterior restoration, such as roofing, siding, gutters, windows, decks and porches," she says. "We also do framing."

But it's the ability to help people in their time of need that really makes the business enjoyable, she says.

"We really do enjoy being able to help customers find a way to improve their lives," Nena says. "We are very experienced in helping with insurance claims."

For example, she said

homeowners aren't always aware of the levels of coverage they have and what is actually covered.

"We've been able to help people get a new roof covered by insurance when they didn't even realize they could do that," she says. "Instead of being out $10,000, they were out only $500 for their deductible. We really enjoy being able to help people out that way.

"Depending on the insurance company, there can be a lot of paperwork to do and we really try to help with that. It's good to have a professional who can meet with the insurance adjuster and have an extra set of eyes on the damage to make sure everything is covered."

God uses Christ's suffering for our soul's healing

All this past week I've been talking to people with scars for a series of stories that I wrote for the newspaper where I work.

I got the idea from a photographer I heard on the radio, talking about a series of photos he had done of people's scars.

He said that every scar tells a story. When I was 9, I bent down to say "hi" to Sam Lang's Basset hound and it jumped up and bit my face, tearing a hole from the right edge of my lip to my chin.

You can barely see the scar all these years later, but it's there. I'm not sure if that scar and the circumstances of how I got it altered my life in any significant way other than I don't stick my face near a strange dog's mouth. Acne scars on my cheeks have affected me more, I think.

But the photographer was right. Every scar tells a story, and last week I met with eight people who told me their stories and showed me their scars.

The first woman I talked with called her scars, about six in all, her "badges of courage," the most prominent one being a rebuilt lip made from the skin and tissue from her inner forearm. She had lip cancer.

As she told her story she used words like "grateful" and "thankful." She praised God for his goodness to her. Her scars remind her that, when we suffer, God is there with us, taking care of those who trust in him.

Looking back, she can trace God's grace to her at every step. No detail escaped his orchestration. He was right there with her, holding her hand, calming her fears.

She said God doesn't always take away the pain, but he makes the pain bearable and then makes something beautiful from it.

Another woman began her story with her scars from a car accident and ended with her emotional scars from a decade of domestic violence and a lifetime of being rejected by her mother.

For much of her life she had felt "dirty, damaged and different," she said. It wasn't until someone told her about Jesus that her scars began to heal.

She said when she brought her wounds to Jesus, his blood "washed them clean and made me whole."

One of the basic tenets of the Christian faith is that Jesus was "pierced for our transgressions, he was crushed for our iniquities; the punishment that brought us peace was upon him (at the Cross), and by his wounds we are healed." (Isaiah 53:5).

It's the crux of the gospel.

An old hymn starts, "Deep were his wounds, and red, on cruel Calvary, as on the cross he bled in bitter agony; but they whom sin has wounded sore, find healing in the wounds he bore."

Christ's death not only took away the penalty of sin, but his sufferings — his beatings, the humiliation of people spitting at him and jeering, his being stripped naked in public and being abandoned by his friends — God somehow uses for our soul's healing.

It's one of those hard-to-explain faith things that's difficult to understand by trying to intellectualize it. It's best understood by experience, by bringing your scarred and broken life to Jesus and standing amazed as he turns your ugliness to beauty.

For the woman who had been beaten by a husband and rejected by her own mother, Jesus took her scars and gave her a ministry to other broken and abused women (and to the men who abused them), telling them of the power of Christ's scars to transform and heal theirs.

Not only that, God gave her another husband, gentle, kind and caring, and in the year before her mother died she heard the words she had ached to hear: "I'm sorry. I love you. Please forgive me."

Some people have scars that never heal. They hold on to bitterness and regret, cursing the people or the circumstances that caused their scars. They relive their injuries, picking at their scabs, taking perverse pleasure in keeping the pain alive.

But for others, for those who trust that God cries when they cry and that it's with tears he allows pain to alter their lives, their scars actually become their source of strength.

Heaven as God sees it

Heaven is a beautiful place because it is the home of God. It is also a place where God has invited the faithful to come. The problem is that we have created a heaven of our own liking rather than the way that God has prepared it.

Tell me why when a lot of people speak of heaven; they try to take worldly things with them. Some talk about asking questions, there will be none, for all answers will be before us. There will be no golf, football, basketball, marriage, etc. It will not be about us and our friends in heaven enjoying our reunion, but rather worshipping God eternally. Again, it is all about God, not US.

Heaven as God has prepared it:

1. It is Home for His children — Heb. 11:13; 1 Cor. 15:19
2. It is eternal — Matt. 25:46
3. It has wonderful associations - Matt. 25:31-46; John 14:1-6; 1 Cor. 15:23-25
4. It is a place of victory — 1 Cor. 15:57; Rev. 21:1-8

We need to speak of heaven as a place of getting to be in the presence God, and worshipping God. When one reads the passages about heaven they always draws our attention to God not US. Heaven is where we appreciate the eternal fellowship with God and ALL the godly of all ages (Matt. 25:21-46; 1 Cor. 15:23-25). Let's go to God's heaven!

Ward students show off science skills

By Nancy Royden
Special to The Anderson News

The displays in this year's science fair at Emma B. Ward Elementary School were put under the microscope more than they have been during the past years, science teacher Jane Thompson said.

"We are looking for what would be expected in competition," she said Friday at the school while surrounded by a room laden with science displays created mostly by fourth-grade students.

Eighty-five students of varying ages participated in the school-wide fair at the elementary on Bypass North in Lawrenceburg.

"We did lessons and they went back and worked on them," Thompson said.

Gage Williams used a mini windmill to show how it can produce energy for less money than other methods, and student Zane Horton used little cars to see how bridge design holds the most weight.

Saykra Minion used three eggs in varying liquids to see how the eggs would smell and if other changes occur.

"If you put it in vinegar, it doesn't smell. I used Mountain Dew and Pepsi for color and smell changes," she said.

Cannon Dotson investigated which type of chocolate melts faster — white, dark or milk.

Gillian Case's entry begs the question, "Do different materials affect a magnet's pull?"

The experiment listed variables, procedures, hypothesis, materials, conclusion and an explanation of results.

Although the appearance and technicality of the displays varied, Thompson said the students used peer evaluation, designed their questions and presented their projects in class before they were put on display.

The students' oral presentations were critiqued on categories such as preparation, enthusiasm, eye contact, materials, procedures and conclusion, she said.

"I'm looking at their thinking and questioning," Thompson said. "Students will teach students and learn from mistakes."

Former Anderson High School basketball star Terry Young, right, and his wife, Lexie, take in the Kentucky Wildcats' practice session at the KFC Yum! Center last Wednesday.

No reason to think Wildcats' winning formula won't continue

Petitioning for name change to The News' bracket contest

Notes that took longer to write than my bracket took to bust. ... Kentucky just has that look of a champion. Give a push or two - or in Cincinnati's case, three or four, or whatever number you want to put in there - and Willie Cauley-Stein will posterize some poor soul making an admirable, but misguided, attempt at stopping the inevitable.

Stay close to the Wildcats, but somewhere around that 30- or 35-minute mark, the wall hits. Case in point: Saturday, with 11:28 to play, Kentucky led Cincinnati 42-35. Just over 10 minutes later, the Wildcats led 64-45. Case 2, SEC Tournament final: With 10:48 left, Kentucky led Arkansas 52-43. At the 4:10 mark it was 69-50.

It's been that way all season against good teams. Back on Dec. 27, Kentucky was clinging to a 35-32 lead at Louisville with just under nine minutes left. Final, 58-50.

I see no reason that the Wildcats won't end up 40-0. There are so many offensive weapons that the chances of no one clicking are very slim. And, of course, how can you simulate Kentucky's defense? You might think you can, but eventually reality sets in.

There are still four games to play but if someone beats Kentucky, then the Washington Generals have hope.

According to my quick research, the Generals have not beaten the Harlem Globetrotters since 1971.

Should have known better than picking a team from a league that can't count to make the Final Four. Thanks Iowa State of the Big 12-11-10.

If you entered our "Beat the Expert" contest, chances are you are in the running for a prize from one of our sponsors. In the bracket contest I entered and am eligible to win, I was in dead last place as of Monday morning. I will be petitioning our sales department to change the contest name next year.

I never thought I would be writing these words three weeks ago when it looked like Louisville was a team in disarray, but the Cards look poised to make their third Final Four in four years after an impressive win over a very good Northern Iowa team Sunday night.

It makes you wonder if Chris Jones' departure was addition by subtraction.

And love him or hate him, Rick Pitino is still one of the best you could have on the sideline when a loss means the season is over.

In case you missed it, be sure to check out my front page story about the seventh-graders at Anderson County Middle School picking the NCAA Tournament field, complete with seeding. Using mathematical analysis, two pairs of students correctly seeded 31 teams. That is amazing.

With tournament scoring down - make that with basketball scoring down in general - there is a renewed talk about shortening the shot clock to 30 seconds. The basic idea is with more possessions, there will be more points.

BEARCAT TRACK BOASTS HIGH QUALITY

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Anderson County track and field might be a perfect example of more quality than quantity.

Despite low overall numbers, the Bearcats appear to be strong in some events, including some possible state contenders, as the season got underway Saturday in the Western Hills Invitational meet.

"Right now, we are low on numbers at the high school due to all the other activities going on," Anderson's second-year coach Keith Brown said. "We just finished basketball, wrestling, the school play and a few other sports and activities. We have around 30 total, 15 boys and 15 girls. We also have about 49 middle school kids running at the middle school level."

Brown, a long-time coach at other schools, could see other athletes join the team as the season progresses and some of those middle-schoolers could be promoted to the high school team by season's end.

But the Bearcats boast some strong talent in certain events.

"We should be strong in the hurdle events, the 400 (-meter) dash, pole vault, shot and discus, triple (jump) and long jump," Brown says.

Sophomore Alorra Sims leads the girls' team after advancing to the state track meet in the long jump and triple jump last year. She finished third in the triple jump in Class AAA with a leap of 35-00, just 7.5 inches behind the winner. Sims also qualified for the state in the 300-meter hurdles and is considered one of Kentucky's top performers.

also return. Junior hurdler Connor Duncan had the highest finish of the returnees, placing ninth in the 300-meter hurdles with a 40.84 time. He hopes to improve that showing in 2015.

Tyger Gilkison's 12-foot effort was good enough for 11th in the pole vault while Nathan McGregor was 14th in the discus throw (125-11) and Casey Moninger's 51.76 was also 14th in the 400-meter dash.

As a team, the Anderson boys finished 14th in the state with 13.5 points.

Some of the members of the 4x400 relay team, which qualified for the state and finished 15th, did not return.

Tyson Yett, who was second in the state in the triple jump (44-10.75) and third in the high jump (6-04) is now at Union College.

"We have six kids that are ranked pretty high from their best marks of last year, but we can't count last year's stats," Brown said. "We need to perform better than last year."

In addition to the returning state qualifiers, Brown is expecting big things from thrower Conner Stockton,

Conner, Kavanaugh coach selected for Hall of Fame

From staff reports

The 2015 Kentucky Association of Basketball Coaches Hall of Fame class had a strong Anderson County flavor when it was announced last Tuesday.

Jimmy Dan Conner, who led Anderson County to the 1971 state runnerup spot, and Earle Jones, who coached Kavanaugh High to a runner-up finish in 1930, are members of the newest Hall of Fame class. They will be inducted into the Hall during a ceremony at the State Theatre in Elizabethtown in July.

According to the press release from the KABC,

"Jimmy Dan was named Mr. Kentucky Basketball in 1971 while also receiving Parade All-American honors that same year. He was named first team All-State in both 1970 and 1971.

"While leading the Anderson County Bearcats to a runner-up finish in the 1971 Sweet 16 and being named to the all-tournament team that same year, Jimmy Dan 'wowed' the crowd with his high arching jump shot and classic style. Conner signed a basketball scholarship with the Univer-

Carlton closes door of hoops career at NAIA ceremony

By John Herndon

Fifteen years after he played his final basketball game for Georgetown College, Will Carlton has finally closed the door on his basketball career.

But few who have ever laced up the high-tops could go out in such a big way.

Carlton was inducted into the National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics Hall of Fame during ceremonies held in conjunction with the association's men's basketball tournament last week in Kansas City.

Carlton, who led Georgetown to the NAIA title in 1998, graduated from Anderson County High School three years earlier.

"It's a really nice honor," said Carlton, who now lives in Harrodsburg and is assistant principal of Mercer County Intermediate School. "To think about where I came from and where I have been makes me laugh."

Carlton remembered that he started playing on a 9-foot goal in his family's driveway. "All I ever wanted to do was get good enough to beat my older brother, Matthew, at H-O-R-S-E. We would bet

Lady Bearcats split with state powers

From staff reports

The Anderson County High School softball team, ranked No. 11 in pre-season statewide coaches' poll, split four games with ranked teams in the prestigious Big M Tournament, hosted by Elizabethtown High School, Friday and Saturday.

The Lady Bearcats were 3-2 on the year going into Monday's 30th District contest at Spencer County.

Friday, the Lady Bearcats posted an impressive 7-3 win over eighth-ranked Owensboro Catholic as Bailey Curry belted a seventh-inning grand slam for the final tally. It was her second home run of the year.

Anderson pitchers Mia Aldridge and Ally Moore combined to give up just four hits and two earned runs to the perennial power. Moore was credited with the win.

Curry finished with 5 RBI while Aldridge had a double and a pair of RBI.

Saturday, the Lady Bearcats got a bit of revenge on 21st-ranked Green County, the team that eliminated the Lady Bearcats in last year's state tournament.

This one was never in doubt as the Lady Bearcats pounded Green County pitching for 12 hits. Curry, Autumn Beasley and Sammy Rogers all had two hits each while Aldridge smacked a two-run double.

Moore got the win, going six inning and striking out seven.

The game was costly, however, as Curry suffered a sprained ankle and was unable to catch the rest of the tournament. Curry did bat as the DH a few times the rest of the tournament, but Aldridge said Curry's inability to run limited her availability.

"Carmen Holt saw her first varsity action behind the plate and did well," Aldridge said.

Curry hit twice in each contest but was taken down for a pinch runner when she got on.

Louisville Mercy, ranked No. 5, handed the Lady Bearcats their first loss of the season, a 3-0 decision that saw Anderson muster just five hits. Trista Craigmyle led Anderson with two hits.

In bracket play, Madisonville, ranked fourth in the state, limited Anderson to three hits in a 2-0 decision Curry smacked a pair of hits for the Lady Bearcats while Moore turned in a terrific pitching performance, scattering six hits over seven innings in a losing effort.

"I thought we played well against the top competition in the state," Anderson coach Brent Aldridge said. "We still make some untimely errors and that hurts you against good competition because those teams make you pay.

"Ally Moore and (Mia) Aldridge pitched extremely well and showed they can compete against the best teams. Right now we are getting back to form.

"Right now, our hitting is extremely rusty and we are not scoring runs unless my 3-4-5 (hitters) hit and my four and five did not hit well against Mercy and Madisonville. We need to hit throughout the lineup. We will fix that."

PARTICIPATES IN ALL-STAR GAME

Anderson County High School senior Austin Cummins poses with Bearcat head basketball coach Glen Drury following the Kentucky Association of Basketball Coaches All-Star game, held Saturday at Transylvania University. Cummins scored 18 points, hitting 4 three-pointers, and dished out 7 assists but the West All-Stars defeated the East, 132-118. Earlier in the week, Cummins was honored as a member of the All-Eighth Region team, as voted on by the region's coaches.

who recently signed with Campbellsville University. He missed making the state in the shot put by an inch last year.

Brown also says Trulee Gikison has a good chance of making the state in the girls' pole vault.

Another key performer could be freshman Elle Buser, who made the state in the 800-meter run as a seventh-grader, but has been hampered by an injury. She is running again but is not completely back as the season begins.

"We are going to nurse her along for a little while," Brown said.

A longtime fixture on the Kentucky track circuit, Brown says those who are out for the team have some high hopes.

"Our expectations for our kids never change," he says. "We expect them to get better each year and do the best they can. When you are trying to build a program, you have to walk before you can run. It will take time but is very possible to achieve."

Longtime assistant steps down

Stephanie Moninger, who has worked with Anderson County track for well over a decade, stepped down during the off-season, Brown said. "She decided to just be a mom this year and enjoy Casey's senior year," he said. "My assistant coaches this year are Scott Buser, Katrina Chilton and Michael Daniels. I am extremely happy to be working with these quality people but the loss of Stephanie will hurt a lot."

Anderson County High School graduate Will Carlton (center) poses with his coach at Georgetown College, Happy Osborne (left) and his Anderson coach, Glen Drury, after Carlton was inducted into the NAIA Hall of Fame last Tuesday in Kansas City. baseball cards and he'd always keep it close enough where I thought I could beat him next time."

Carlton eventually grew to 6-feet-8-inches tall and led Anderson County High School to a runner-up finish in the 1995 Eighth Region Tournament. He signed with the University of Utah out of high school, playing one year under Coach Rick Majerus and making the round of 16 in the NCAA Tournament, where the Utes were eliminated by Carlton's favorite team as a child, the Kentucky Wildcats.

Carlton then transferred to Georgetown, where he led the Tigers to their first NAIA championship.

Carlton was elected to the Hall of Fame last fall. He asked his high school coach, Glen Drury, to be his presenter at the Hall of Fame induction ceremony.

"Having Coach (Drury) there meant the world to me," Carlton said. "Obviously, he is the driving force behind my basketball success. More importantly he and (Drury's wife) Jennifer were like parents to me in high school and provided me a consistent place to turn when I needed it most. I'm so glad they were able to be out there and share the night with me."

Carlton, who was also a Kentucky All-Star and first team all-stater after his high school career, says while he was honored to be selected to the Hall of Fame, it also gave reason to reflect.

"It's bittersweet in a way," he said. "I feel like it closes the door on my basketball days.

"Except for (Kevin) Garnett, (Paul) Pierce and (Andre) Miller, all the guys I played with or against are done playing and those three guys will probably retire after this season. It kind of feels like the end of a really good movie that you'll never be able to watch again."

I would almost bet money it will make little difference.

Here is a novel idea: Call fouls when they are fouls.

Even with the shot clock and three-point shot, this year's Kentucky team, one that, you know, no one can run with, is averaging 74.7 points a game.

Without the three or the clock the 1978 national champs averaged 84.2 points a game. It beat Duke, 94-88, for the title.

(And, if you remember, that team with Rick Robey, Mike Phillips and James Lee, was supposed to be "brutalizing the game.")

The 1975 Kentucky team, captained by Anderson County's Jimmy Dan Conner, scored 92.2 points a game but lost to UCLA, 92-85, in the final.

Go back nearly 50 years to the 1996 Wildcats, Rupp's Runts. Led by Pat Riley and Louie Dampier, who would become the greatest three-point shooter in the ABA, that team averaged 86.9 points.

Defense was getting between your man and the ball, not a mugging. Offense was free flowing and fun to watch.

It would help, too, if players really learned to shoot. Sometimes I wonder where the mid-range jump shot - see Goose Givens videos for a refresher course - have gone.

Of course, some say the emphasis on defense has a lot to do with lower scoring, but just clogging the lane and turning the game into something that should be on WWE is not what made basketball a beautiful sport.

Just call the fouls and it will eventually cut that garbage out.

Revised Final Four: Kentucky, Arizona, Louisville and Duke. Wouldn't that be fun?

Enjoy the musical mornings brought on by warmer temps

Spring turkey season gives four weekends to chase birds

Spring is finally trying to make it back to the Bluegrass State. The calendar says it is officially here as of March 20 but I cannot help but be a little skeptical the way the last couple of months have gone for us in Kentucky

Jeff Lilly
Columnist

Temperatures are warming up and God is putting some green color back in to some of our vegetation so things are looking better each day. If you're an early riser and live in the country, like myself, you have probably noticed that along with some of the warmer temperatures come much more "musical" mornings and evenings. The warmer temps bring the tree frogs or "peepers" out in force to help welcome spring. The birds also seem to turn things up a notch to join in especially early and late in the day.

Around my place I have been hearing a different sound that some folks, if you have heard the sound recently, might wonder what is making it. The sound is hard to describe with words but sounds mostly like a very nasally "peent.....peent.....peent". The sound around my place is mostly in the mornings and occurs about thirty minutes before daybreak.

I would guess that some folks would think it to be a huge frog or bug of some sort but no that is not even close. The sound comes from a very odd looking and acting bird called the American Woodcock. The bird is also been known as the "timberdoodle". This game bird has a chunky body, short neck, short legs, has a long bill and large eyes that are set far back on its rather large head.

The long beak allows the Woodcock to probe the ground hunting for its main diet of invertebrates and earthworms.

These birds are mostly nocturnal, solitary and pretty secretive but are noisier this time of year as they move more into our part of Kentucky for breeding season. These birds are seldom seen unless flushed and display a very erratic flight pattern. They also have a very odd walk when on the ground. They display a short step or two then "bobs" back and forth with each step. Keep ears and eyes open for these interesting birds especially on warm, damp spring evenings and mornings.

Turkey season

My favorite game bird season opens soon also. Spring wild turkey season for our youth hunters to chase gobblers is scheduled for Saturday, April 4 and Sunday, April 5. Get your license, hunter education cards and gear ready now and take a kid turkey hunting.

The statewide spring turkey season opens Saturday, April 18 thru Sunday, May 10. That gives us four full weekends of turkey bird chasing so get out and enjoy. Don't forget to keep an eye open for those morel mushrooms too. They go really well with fried turkey, taters and cornbread.

Fishing

I have also been hankering to get the fishing poles out. Obviously spring is a great time to break the winter doldrums and hit the water. There is a lot of water too. With the recent snows and rains we have had here in the Bluegrass Region come the flooding. I rode down to Van Buren Boat Ramp recently to check out just how high the water is in Taylorsville Lake. There is no ramp or parking lot showing. The road is gated off up the hill on the main road due to the water being backed up just beyond that gate. It'll be a few weeks before the water gets back to decent levels. That will just give the fish that much more time to build up their appetite as I build up mine.

Quick shots

*Don't forget to purchase new hunting, fishing and trapping licenses and permits as needed before going afield or on the water. All Kentucky 2014-15 licenses expired on February 28th, 2015. You will need to purchase the 2015-16 licenses effective March 1st, 2015.

Take a kid hunting, fishing or trapping soon!
See ya outside!

March brings elusive Muskie Madness to Kentucky waters

By Kevin Kelly

Ky. Dept. of Fish & Wildlife Resources

The NCAA Division I men's basketball tournament captivates the state of Kentucky every March and this year all eyes are on John Calipari and the University of Kentucky.

Can the top-seeded Wildcats bring a ninth national title back to Lexington by becoming the first team since 1976 to finish the season undefeated? University of Louisville fans may hope not.

For some anglers, March also means Muskie Madness, an obsession among fanatics who tolerate the winter months waiting for their version of the Big Dance.

Kentucky's muskellunge lakes have iced out and people are primed for the spring bite while some northern lakes may still be iced over or the muskie seasons there haven't opened.

"Among anglers, we've developed a reputation as an early-season or spring break destination," said Gregg Thomas, who owns Battle the Beast Guide Service and guides clients on Cave Run Lake and elsewhere. "It's a good fishery and a place that people want to come to."

Kentucky is within the natural range of the Ohio strain of muskie. Dams built on some of the state's native muskie streams in eastern and southern Kentucky last century formed Buckhorn, Cave Run and Green River Lakes.

"Those fish will be going through their pre-spawning and spawning movements," said Mike Hardin, assistant director of fisheries for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "You can find them up tributaries and streams. As soon the water warms up, you may find them on mud flats near stream channels."

At Green River Lake, the area around Green River Marina is popular among boat and bank anglers alike from mid-February through mid-April.

"It doesn't catch a lot of wind, so it warms up pretty quick and it's fairly shallow, especially the back part of that cove," said Eric Cummins, southwestern fisheries district biologist. "The muskies pile in there. It's an excellent spot where you can easily fish from the bank and have a good chance to hook into one."

Cave Run Lake, which produced the standing state record muskie in November 2008, features a similarly productive spot for bank anglers.

Stoney Cove Recreation Area sits at a corner on the lake-side face of the dam. As a bonus, Stoney Cove offers close proximity to the tailwater area on the other side of Ky. 826.

"That can be a great fishery," in the spring, Thomas said of the tailwater below Cave Run Lake dam.

The same holds true for the Tailwater Recreation Areas below Green River Lake and Buckhorn Lake. Outflow information for Buckhorn, Cave Run and Green River Lakes may be found by accessing the "Water Information" section on the Louisville District of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineer's website at www.lrl.usace.army.mil. For muskie fishing, a favorable discharge rate is 1,500 to 2,000 cubic feet per second.

In years when the water is not already elevated by late winter, Hardin has experienced fantastic muskie fishing on Cave Run Lake when the water is on the rise and the trees are just leafing out.

Erratic weather and high water come with the territory in spring and add to the challenge of catching muskies.

This year, snow melt and recent heavy rains have many lakes somewhere between summer pool and flood stage. Whether fishing by boat or on the bank, these conditions can be overcome.

A novice muskie angler can get started with 7-foot heavy action baitcasting rod matched with a heavy duty baitcasting reel. Braided line in the 50- to 100-pound test class with a 9- to 18-inch wire leader offers a sense of security when a muskie strikes and thrashes on the end of the line.

Rattling-style lipless crankbaits, minnow baits, jerkbaits, spinnerbaits and in-line spinners are all good offerings to have on hand in the spring. Live bait also is an option, but quick-strike rigging is recommended as a way to help reduce mortality rates for catch-and-release muskies.

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Resources stocks Buckhorn, Green River and Cave Run Lakes annually with 13-inch fingerlings reared at the Minor E. Clark Fish Hatchery near Morehead for the purpose of maintaining trophy fisheries. Dewey Lake also was stocked with muskie last year because of hatchery surplus but those fish aren't expected to reach 36 inches until 2019.

A 36-inch minimum size limit for muskies is in place for Buckhorn, Cave Run and Green River Lakes. Earlier this month, the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission proposed a 36-inch size limit for Dewey Lake that would go into effect in March 2016 pending legislative approval. There is a 30-inch size limit on muskie elsewhere in the state.

Anglers are reminded to purchase their 2015-16 fishing licenses as the new license year started March 1. Consult the Kentucky Fishing and Boating Guide for complete licensing information. It's available online at fw.ky.gov and wherever licenses are sold.

Dancing Pro

FIRST LADIES have a lot of important duties from welcoming people to the White House to organizing events. Many continue to work after they leave the White House, and some even worked before. Before they became First Ladies, for example, Hillary Clinton was a lawyer, Laura Bush was a librarian and Betty Ford was a dancer.

BETTY FORD got interested in dancing early on in her life. She took several classes as a child and taught kids how to dance as a teenager. She continued to study dance as an adult, first in Vermont and then in New York City. Ford worked as a fashion model to pay for her dance training.

FORD CONTINUED to dance after she moved back to her hometown in Michigan. She formed her own dance group and taught others how to dance. Betty Ford loved to dance, and it showed every time she stepped out onto the dance floor.
